DAILT PATRIOT OFFICE, ? NASHTHLE, June 26, 1860. We have now entered upon what is gonerally the dullest portion of the business year; but what, this year, promises to be daller than usual. This is attributable partly to the stringency of the money market, but more particularly to the fallure of the wheat crop, which for some seasons past, has been highly advantageous, in affording a means of bringing money into this State. But all is not gloom. The crops which are garnered in the autumn bid fair to be the most produc tive known since 1855, if no summer drought comes to blight them.

COTTON.-The cotton trade has closed leaving la our warehouses a considerable quantity, owned by planters, some of which will be sold before the next sesson, as demanded by manufacturers. In the absence of demand, it would be improper to assume a scale of prices.
